There is another crisis in education; can India turn this to its advantage?

In a world where excellent content is often available on the Internet, and where machine translation will soon make the content available in the mother tongue, the preponderance of English, as well as the Anglosphere model of universities, may both be under siege.

Education in Cinema

Kota Factory Season 2 :TVF offers a grimmer, more mature follow-up

The second season of Kota Factory begins with a war cry. "Unrewarded geniuses are not geniuses but clichés," Maheshwari sir announces in a matter-of-fact tone to a class full of aspirants, that sucks the colour, quite literally out of the image on screen.

The first few minutes of this season sees Kota draped in colour before it recedes to the black and white tonality of the first season. It suggests that reality, its grating epiphanies do not necessarily elevate the world around you. It momentarily rescues you from its inevitabilities. As Vaibhav Pandey (Mayur More) takes his oath of Maheshwari classes, the wiped grin from his face echoes the war-like nature of an Indian life. To outgrow its ordinariness, you have to fight battles. Despite its lack of ingenuity and other false notes, through this season of Kota Factory, creators The Viral Fever (TVF) — often criticised for their safe cinema — have finally pushed the envelope.

Indian Schools Can't Ignore Ugliness in Society, Must Prepare Kids to Deal with Conflict

Schools are often described as temples of learning. Taken quite literally, it means that the boundaries between schools and the outside world are sharply defined. The world which the child lives in, their knowledge, experiences and perceptions are kept as far away from school as possible. What helps achieve this division is a clearly defined syllabus, textbooks, classroom processes, evaluation procedures.

This Young Girl's Hilarious Rant About Schools and the Indian Educational System is All Too Real
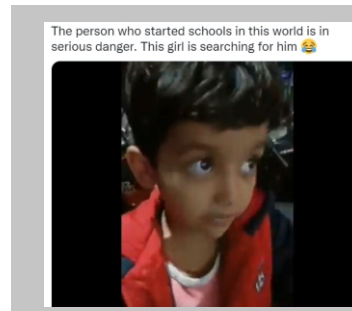

A little girl's rant about going to school and how the education system in India needed changes has left people on social media in splits (and nostalgic).

Let's face it, no child enjoys waking up early in the morning and rushing to get ready in order to get to school on time.

The girl from Gujarat was shown in a viral video whining about having to get up at 6 a.m. for school, quickly get ready, and attend back-to-back lessons. She also had a vengeance in mind for everyone who started attending school. The 1-minute-long video was first shared on Twitter by Police Officer Arun Bothra, in which the girl was demanding for freedom from school for a month. In the video, the girl could be seen speaking in Gujarati and was full of rage as she complained about getting up, brushing, eating, having milk, getting ready for school, quickly catching the school bus and so on. She further complained that after reaching school one had to attend a prayer, then study English, Math, EVS, Gujarati, general knowledge.

"Poore mahine... Pehle prayer, fir English, fir Maths, fir EVS, fir Gujarati, fir GK" she complained. What is more funny about the video is that the girl then added" "GK matlab Maths". When the person recording the video asked the girl what would she do to the person who came up with the concept of schools, she responded by saying, "Main usse dho ke na, puri paani mein daal ke istri kar daalungi (I'll wash that person, splash water on and him/her out)" without skipping a bit.

The video was fittingly captioned as: "The person who started schools in this world is in serious danger. This girl is searching for him."

Since being posted, the video has been viewed over 2 lakh 78 thousand times and has garnered over 9,400 likes. Many users called the video hilarious, while others, recalling their own school days, have said it is relatable. Some even said that there should, in fact, be a change in the education system. Delhi Deputy Chief Minister and Education Minister Manish Sisodia also commented on the video saying, "Oh my God! A school should be opened for the ones who build and run the school... and this girl will be the principal of the school."

Interestingly, Indian society is divided in multiple layers based on caste, class, ethnicity, gender, etc., making conflict an everyday phenomenon in their lives. This differentiated positioning of the child impacts rather directly their identities and experiences. For example, a Dalit child, especially from a rural area, learns very early in life that they will be discriminated against in almost every walk of life—place where they live, their access to basic human rights such as land, water and basic facilities, and their interactions with others. The Indian education system, however, plays it safe and turns a blind eye to all the ugliness of the society. It neither acknowledges conflict, nor entertains any discussion or query around it. That must be accepted and students must be trained in acknowledging the harsh reality of world.Learning and assessment in schools should assist the children in pure learning rather than quizzing them what they may not know.

नया शहर

शिवानी शर्मा
B.Ed 1st year,1141

रास्ते बदल गए, नजारे बदल गए,
त्योहारों के ख़त्म होते ही, बस्ते भर गए।।
रेल की वह आवाज़ के साथ ,पकड़े अपने बस्तों के हाथ,
निकल पड़े करने एक नई शुरुआत।।
कुछ बदली सी थी वह रात, एक नई सुबह के साथ,
पकड़ा नए शहर का हाथ।।
चांद और सूरज नए शहर में भी एक सी,
पर फिर भी वाबस्ता नही।।
परिंदा और फलक भी एक सी,
पर फिर भी वाबस्ता नही।।
मां की याद,पापा का लाड,बहन से लड़ाई,
फिर भी भविष्य की ओर एक कदम बड़ाई।।
डर लगा थोड़ा, हां डर लगा थोड़ा,
पर जिंदगी ने हर चुनौती से मुलाकात कराई।।
अपनी मिट्टी से कोसो दूर,
नए शहर के साथ नई शुरुआत।।
रिश्तेदारों की थोड़ी बातों के साथ,
कहते "लड़की है!ना छोड़ो इसका हाथ"
फिर भी मां के विश्वास के साथ,
मैंने की नई शुरुआत।।
कुछ रूकावटे, कुछ परेशानियां,
कुछ उलझने, कुछ घबराहटे।।
मन में थोड़ी सी हलचल,
पर मां का विश्वास जिसने कहा "तू चल"।।
यहां अनजान हूं,पर कमजोर नही,
यहां रास्ते नए है, मंजिल नहीं।।
बस इतनी गुजारिश है, ऐ शहर तुझसे,
यहां सब है अनजान,फिर भी इस भीड़ में,
"मिल जाए एक पहचान"।।
